

National Security Speaker Series

Pierangelo Isernia
University of Siena

"Partners Apart?
The Foreign Policy Attitudes of The American and European Publics"

Monday, November 10, 2003
12:00 p.m. *
Mershon Center
Room 120

Pierangelo Isernia (Ph.D., University of Padua) is Professor of International Relations in the Department of History, Law, Political and Social Science at the University of Siena.

His primary research focuses on public opinion and foreign policy, Europeanization and domestic policy and the role of national identity and the use of force. He is the author of numerous books, including Public Opinion and the International Use of Force (Routledge, 2001), and numerous articles.

*R.S.V.P. to Ann Powers if you plan to attend this event.

